Forms of Prayer

Salat is a way of remembering and supplication before God.

Ramadan (the month of fasting), everyone on the fast goes without food and water from dawn to dusk.

Hajj, is essentially a form of worship.

Research one of the above forms of Prayer.

- ☐ What is involved in this form of prayer?
- ☐ Describe how it is seen as a form of prayer.
- ☐ What rituals, prayers and symbols are associated with this prayer form?

- ☐ Present your information in the form of a poster. Be creative in displaying your information.

Prayer Forms in Islam

All forms of prayer in Islam are essentially designed for the remembrance and worship of God (Allah).

Islam recognises two forms of prayer:

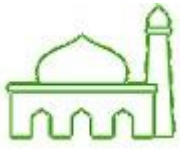

- One is the personal, devotional, and spontaneous type, not bound by any rituals or formulas.
- The other is ritual, (known as Salat) the obligatory prayers often congregational, with specific words and postures, to be offered five times a day: at sunrise, midday, mid-afternoon, sunset, and before going to bed.

Salat must always be preceded by ablutions (wudu') of ritually washing the face, hands and feet.

At the five appointed times, a muezzin announces a call to prayer (adhan), traditionally from a mosque's minaret. Today, the muezzin is usually heard on the radio or people sometimes use a service such as the "salat pager," which sends a reminder to the believer's pager as prayer times approach.

Islamic prayer begins in a standing position and moves through several simple postures until the supplicant is kneeling.

The content of prayer is glorification of God, recitations of the Qur'an, and blessings on the Prophet. Salat concludes with the taslima (greeting),

"Peace be upon you," even when praying alone.
