

God's Creation

(a reflection on Scripture passages that reveal God's creation.)

Teacher notes:

Divide the class into two groups – Group A and Group B (if possible, have the same number of students in each group)

Part 1

Group A

Have one student in your group read the following aloud:

Psalm 104:1-18

As individuals, re-read the passage and reflect on the following:

- What does the reading say about God's creative activity?
- What does the story tell us about God?

As a group, have a quick discussion about the above points.

Group B

Have one student in your group read the following aloud:

Psalm 104:19-35

As individuals, re-read the passage and reflect on the following:

- What does the reading say about God's creative activity?
- What does the story tell us about God?

As a group, have a quick discussion about the above points.

Part 2

Create pairs – Student A with a Student B

Student A will have 1 minute to explain to his / her partner how Psalm 104:1-18 reveals God's creative activity and what the story tells us about God.

Student B responds with a 30 second summary of what their partner has just explained.

Reverse the roles.

Student B will have 1 minute to explain to his / her partner how Psalm 104:19-35 reveals God's creative activity and what the story tells us about God.

Student A responds with a 30 second summary of what their partner has just explained.

Part 3

In pairs, identify and record quotes from the two passages that support any evidence of God as creator.

Part 4

As an individual:

From your research today find evidence of what God created based on the two parts of Psalm 104 poem - the table should include:

- words
- quotes (identify any metaphors or similes)

Psalm 104:1-18	Psalm 104:19-35
An example "You make the winds your messengers." This is a metaphor that suggests that God is powerful and made the wind, and in this metaphor, he is communicating that he is the maker of everything on Earth.	An example "(You) touch the mountains and they smoke." This is a metaphor that suggests God's overwhelming power and might, with only a touch he can set mountains on fire and cause a volcano to erupt.
